The history of NH Collection Amsterdam Barbizon Palace

A combination of historic charm and the contemporary facilities of NH Collection Amsterdam Barbizon Palace, transform every stay into an extraordinary experience. The hotel is located in the oldest part of the city, encompassing nineteen 17th-century townhouses that have been seamlessly converted into a single, unified interior.

The history of the neighbourhood dates back to the early 15th century, coinciding with the very beginnings of Amsterdam, when a dam was constructed between the river Amstel and the sea (het IJ). The city's first chapel, Saint Olof's, was established here and continues to be utilised today as one of the hotel's meeting venues. This area originally emerged as a shipyard, from which many expeditions to exotic destinations embarked. As goods were brought back, the houses were converted into warehouses and storage facilities, giving the Zeedijk its distinctive architectural appearance that remains today. In the 18th and 19th centuries, the area became more economically diverse, eventually evolving into the shopping street we see today.

For many decades the city prospered but also faced periods of decline, particularly during the economic hardships of the 1970's and 1980's. Numerous buildings in the historic city centre were abandoned and fell into disrepair, often being demolished with little regard for their historical significance. To prevent such fate in this neighbourhood, the city of Amsterdam decided to establish a high-end hotel, culminating in the 5-star property we know today.

"Barbizon" in the hotel name, derives from a village in the woods of Fontainebleau near Paris, which was a popular retreat for artists during the 19th century. The style and colour tones of this artistic movement inspired the hotel's design, creating a relaxing haven for every guest arriving in the city.

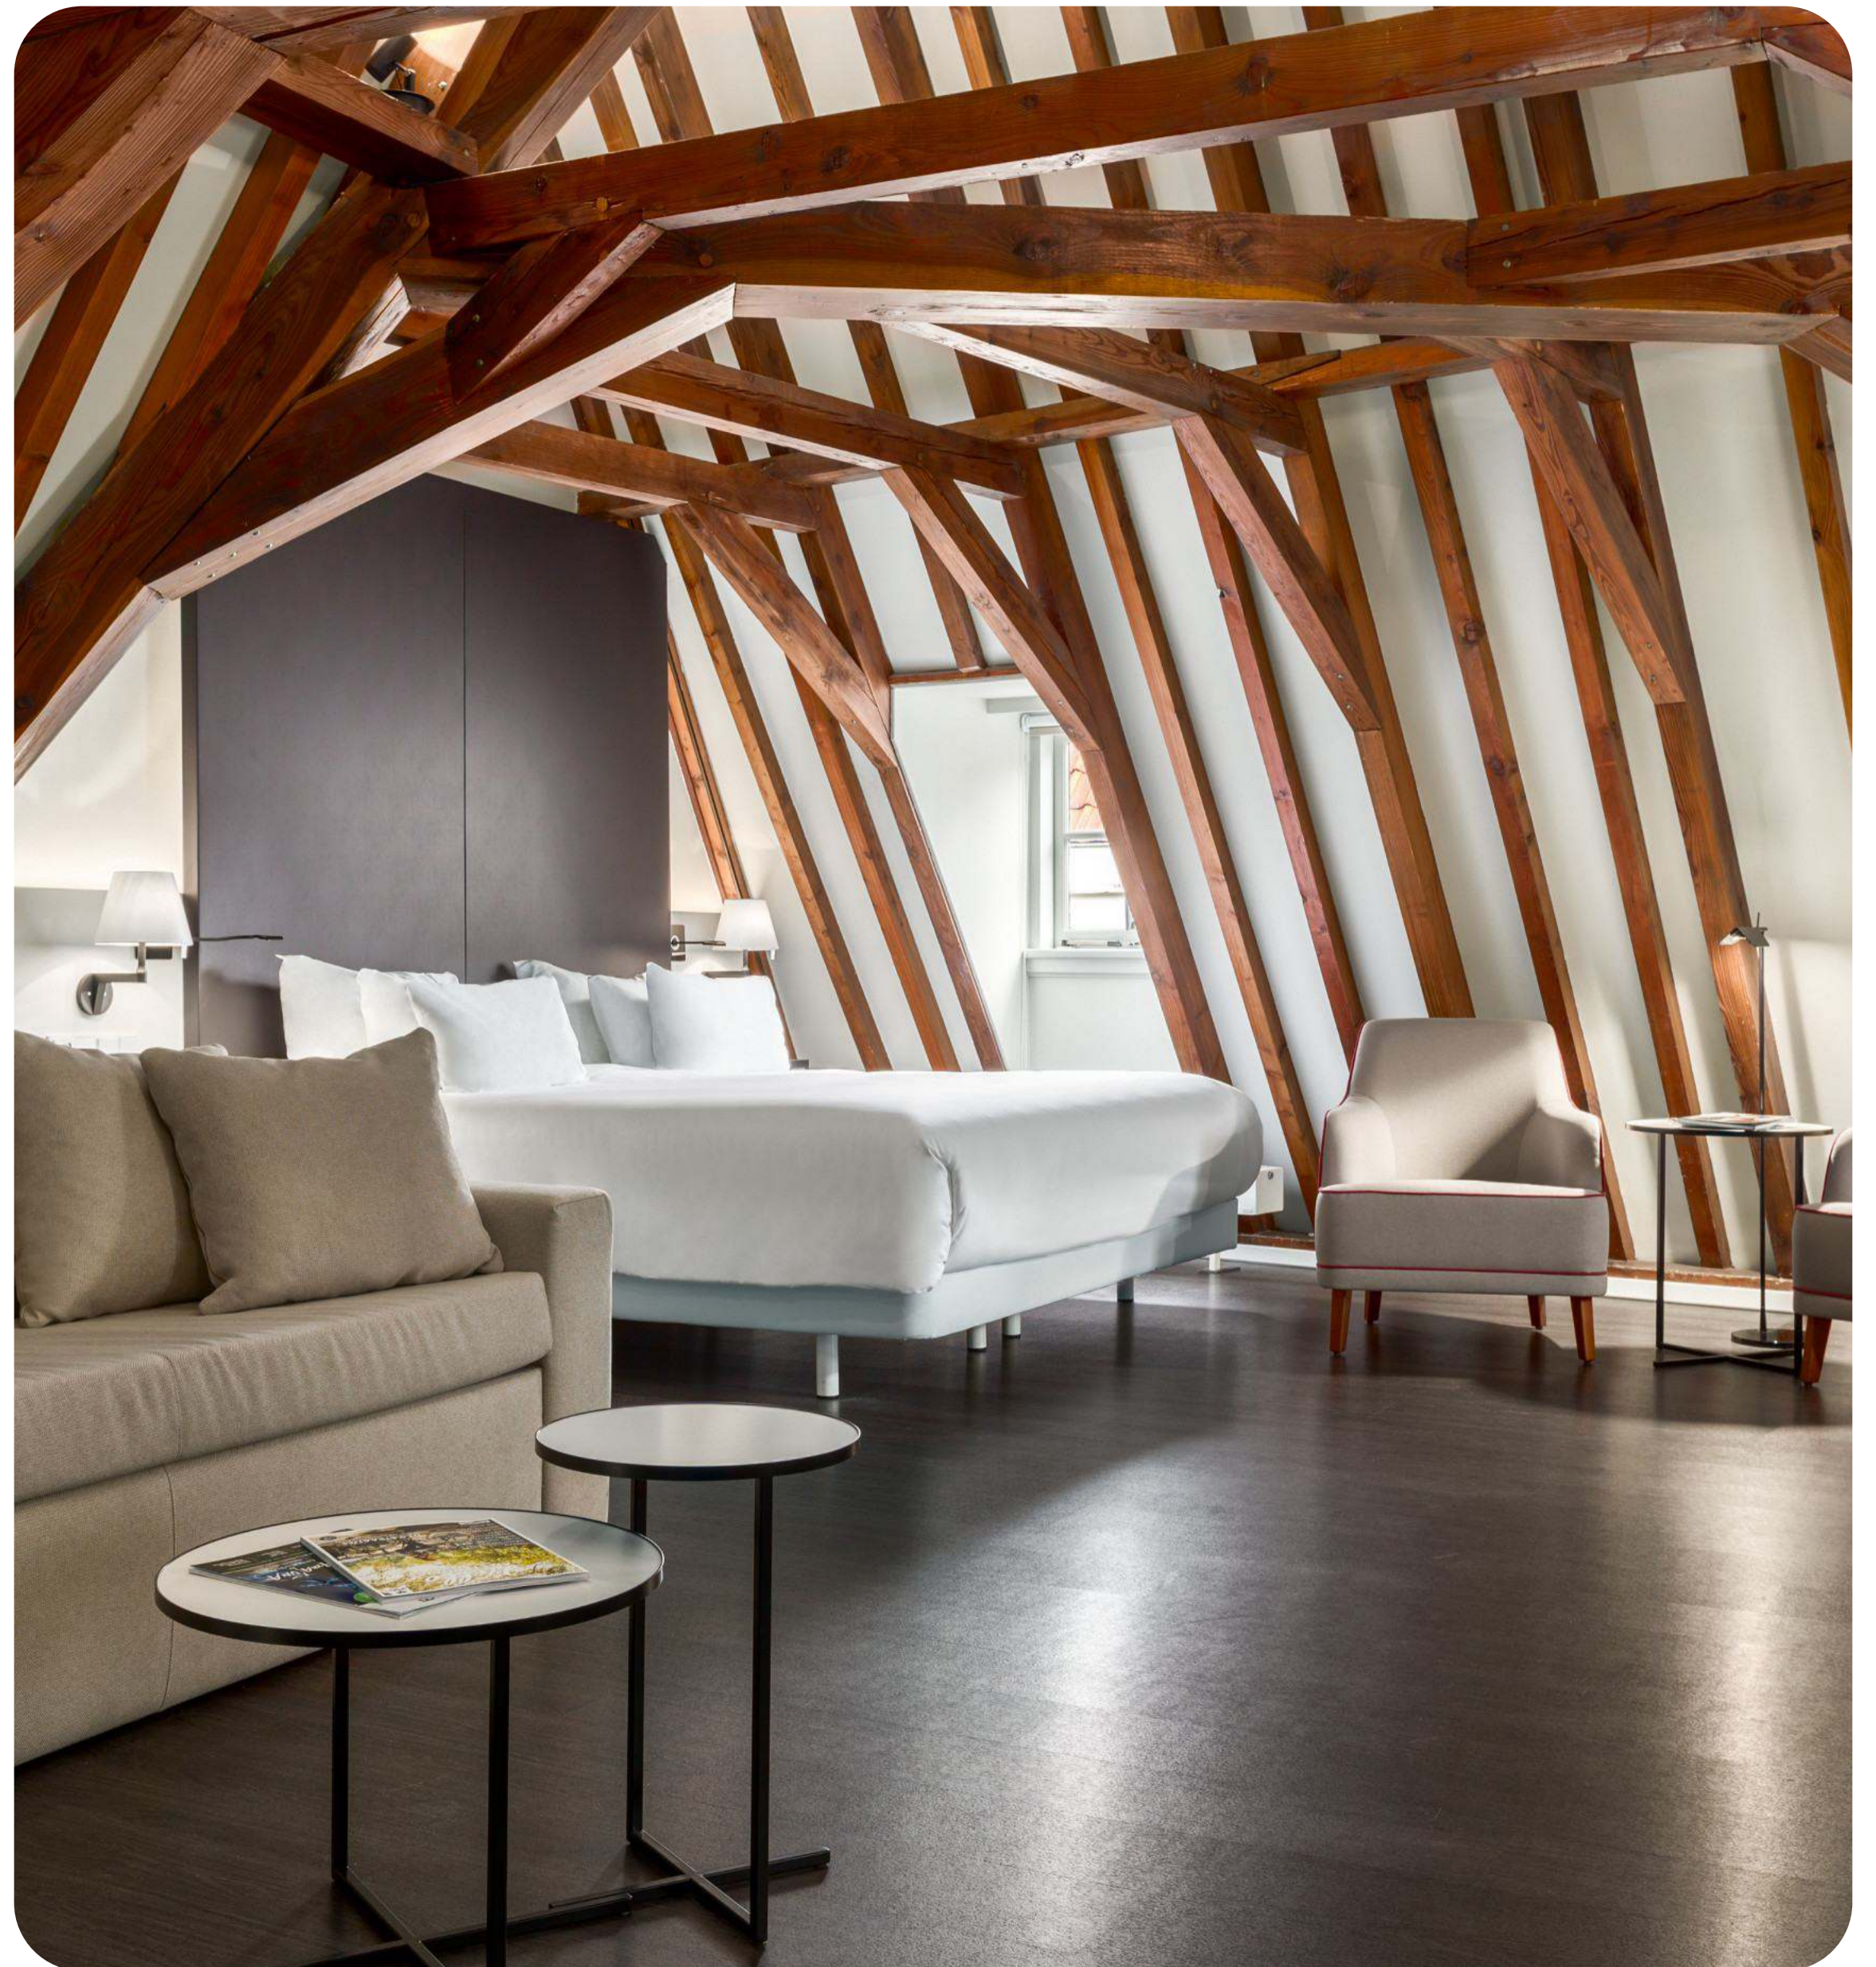

An important feature of the hotel, is the historic Saint Olof Chapel. A 15th century chapel which was initially built and used as a church, but also where the East Indian Trading company handed out its first shares. The building had a religious purpose until 1912, afterwards becoming a cheese market or a community centre. In 1966 the building burned down and after many years of neglect, it was purchased by the hotel and rebuilt. Today the venue hosts various events, from weddings and concerts to stakeholder meetings.
